Earn your degree from the first International Relations Department in the United States in the city where the United Nations was founded.

Have a true international experience: Network with classmates from around the globe. Take a semester abroad and still graduate on time.

Choose from an academic or professional track with an interdisciplinary faculty who bring diverse international experience to their teaching and advising.

Who We Are

About Us

The M.A. in I.R. program prepares graduate students to enter a competitive workforce in government, business and non-profits or to pursue advanced graduate training leading to a Ph.D. in the field. We span the planet from Asia to the Americas, to Africa, to Europe. We offer courses in every major theme of IR: global governance, international political economy, intercultural relations, national and ethnic identities, foreign policy analysis, development studies, environment, international security, diplomacy, human rights, terrorism, and media.

Study abroad, graduate on time

The I.R. M.A. program offers a semester-long study abroad option

- complement the diverse curriculum at the San Francisco campus with an international experience
- gain an Asian or European perspective on issues
- complete three elective classes in either Korea or Italy with no delay in time to graduation.

“The Program provided me with broad knowledge of the world . . . The internships I had during my studies were also key to realizing my first professional job.”

Katherine Zavala (2005), Program Manager of Grassroots Alliances at IDEX

Scott D. Webb (2005) is the Senior Program Officer for East Africa at Relief International in Washington, DC.
